The locals' idea is to reach the school capacity of 350 students with the school premises similar to the European ones - to have classrooms, a cafeteria and offices for teachers. In addition, they want the campus to be environmentally friendly, education to be modern with a link to the traditional culture and available regardless of the social status.

The Czech NGO Himálajský patron provides them with donations to build new school buildings, helps the school management with administration, educates the teachers and enriches the education with various short-term projects.

Being just 8 years old, Tsewang Norboo, had to leave the Little Tibet and move to the lowland India. Having no contact with his family, he had to study in this foreign environment, in an unknown language until the age of 25. After obtaining a college degree, he decided to give up a lucrative government job and become a headmaster in the newly founded school, so that no more children from his village have to suffer like he did.

quiz

Which of the following items made us miss our flight from New Delhi to the nice, mainly buddhist Leh and get separated from the rest of the group by flying deeper to the zone of conflict, approx. 200 km from Islamabad, to the fully muslim Srinagar (the city of scammers, where literally the first person we met after leaving the airport tried to scam us and then got aggressive and threatening) before the volunteering even started?
